Senate Requests President To Return Nominations Of Power Board

SITUATION UNIQUE IN NATIONAL HISTORY

President May Defy Senate—Strange Impasse Will Be Provided

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—President Hoover's reply to the senate's action in requesting him to return the papers of his three appointees to the Federal Power Commission may go to the senate today, it was indicated at the White House.

During the forenoon, Mr. Hoover was in conference with Attorney General Mitchell and Senator Hebert (R) of Rhode Island, a constitutional authority.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—An extraordinary political dilemma confronted President Hoover today as a result of the senate's action in formally requesting him to return the nominations of three new federal power commissioners, who were confirmed and sworn into office before Christmas.

This precedent-shattering request was made in reference to the appointments of George O. Smith, chairman, Marcel Garsaud, and Claude L. Draper. It was the senate's reply to their order, dismissing Charles A. Russell, Attorney, and William V. King, accountant, looked upon as "enemies of the power trust."

The senate first voted to reconsider each nomination and then requested the president to return the necessary papers. There were two record roll-calls on Smith; the senate first voting 44 to 37 to reconsider.

Former President Of Panama Is Held

Will Not Allow Former Leader To Leave Country Till Probe Is Completed

(International News Service)
COLTON, Panama, Jan. 10.—Former president Florencio Arosemena of Panama was brought back to Colon today after an ineffective attempt to leave the country aboard the S. S. California.

Accompanied by his family, the deposed president journeyed to Balboa and was boarding the liner for Los Angeles when officials of the new revolutionary regime prevented him from leaving. They ruled he must stay in the country pending a disposition of public funds by his regime.

Spain today recognized the new Panamanian regime, informing the government through its ambassador, the Marquis de Los Arcos, that the change in no way affects diplomatic relations between the two countries.

Hope To Break Deadlock Over Loan Relief Bill

Republican Leaders May Use Drastic Means To Get Action

AID FOR CITIES IS BEING DEMANDED

Representative Laguardia Believes City Relief As Well As Farm Needed

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Republican leaders of the house are preparing drastic action to break the five day deadlock over the $45,000,000 feed and seed loan relief bill for drought-stricken farmers, it was indicated today.

All efforts to effect a compromise on the senate amendment adding $15,000 to provide for farmers in drought areas have thus far failed, with the result that the "steam roller" methods may be adopted to send the bill to conference.

Urgent appeals were pouring in on congress from the South to hasten the drought-relief loan and permit farmers to prepare for early plantings, while criticism of the relief plans of the administration continued in both chambers.

Republican leaders, it was indicated by speaker Longworth will demand a special rule early next week to obtain action on the drought-relief bill.

Spokesmen for both Republican and Democratic factions in the house hurled charges at each other, and sought to lay the blame for delay on each other's doorstep.

Rep. Wood (R) of Indiana, chairman of the appropriations committee, declared he would not yield to the Caraway amendment providing a $15,000,000 food loan, nor would he accept the suggestions of Rep. Laguardia (R) of New York that $30,000,000 be appropriated—half for cities and half for rural sections.

Human Chain Seeks To Rescue Workmen Trapped Underground

(International News Service)
LIVERMORE, Cal., Jan. 10.—Thirty rescuers toiling as a "human chain" strove feverishly today to reach 20 of their fellow workmen trapped 2,300 feet underground by a cave-in of tons of rock, dirt, timber and concrete in the Camp Mitchell tunnel of the Hetch Hetchy water project, 16 miles east of here.

It will be impossible to rescue the men before noon, officials declared. It may be an hour or two later, than that even though no serious complications arise.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 10.—An emergency crew of drillers today were working at the Camp Mitchell tunnel of the Hetch Hetchy water project in an effort to release nineteen men trapped underground by a cave-in.

Shortly after the wall of rock and silt fell last night rescue workers drove air pipes through and oxygen was pumped to the entrapped men. None of the workers were killed in the slide, reports declared.

First estimates from Camp Mitchell declared that it would be several hours before the men could be reached. The slide occurred 1400 feet from the east entrance where twelve men were killed in a blast last July.

Husband Abducts Young Girl Bride

Intensive Manhunt Starts In Elk County For Abductors Of Young Girl

(International News Service)
RIDGWAY, Pa., Jan. 10.—Gula Neuriter, 19-year old maid, who was abducted from the home of State Representative John N. Flynn, her employer, today was believed by police to be speeding toward Washington, D. C., in the automobile of her husband, William Franklin Copenhaver, whom she married January 8.

According to police, the couple were secretly married before justice of the peace Holmes at Emporium, Pa. It was said the bridegroom was of Catholic faith but no church ceremony was held for the couple. Copenhaver was said by police to have been accompanied by Alfred Norman, proprietor of a roadhouse at Washington, when they drove away with the young girl last night.

Copenhaver, according to police, met the girl last December when he was employed by the United States Geologic Survey in Elk county. He was said to have promised to return for her after he left the district, following their marriage last Thursday.

Residents of Elk county, together with police officials, began an intensive manhunt for the two men who late last night drove up to the Flynn home and were said by police to have forcibly captured the lightly clad girl who came to their small sedan parked in the street.

Investigation by local police led them to the belief that the girl was in the company of her husband who was taking her to Washington over the state highway through Philadelphia.

Fire Destroys Home In Union Township

Second Fire At Home On English Avenue Results In Destruction Of House

Fire Protection Scanty—City Firemen Save Adjoining Home

For a second time in two months a stubborn fire swept through the frame two-story home of the Edgar S. Walkup family on English avenue extension Friday afternoon about 5 o'clock and this time flames made such rapid progress that city firemen, summoned by neighbors in the Union township community, stood by helpless while the house was leveled to the stone foundation.

It was another exhibition of the lack of fire fighting facilities in the townships that border the city limits. Due to need of water and the dryness of the wells and streams in the district all that city firemen could do was to save a neighbor's house from a similar fate.

The flames left little for the Walkup family, made homeless by the blaze, Fire Chief Lynn, who was active at the scene and directed the saving of the other residence, estimated the loss at approximately

Three Missing As Freighter-Tugboat Are In Collision

Four Others Suffering From Exposure Are Rescued Off Hog Island

(International News Service)
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10.—Three men were reported missing today and four others were suffering from exposure as a result of a crash between the Norwegian freighter Gisla and the tugboat Richmond off Hog Island near here last midnight.

The tug sank immediately from a huge hole torn in her side by the collision. The Gisla dropped anchor and picked up the four men found floating in the water, but it is feared three other members of the tug's crew were drowned.

The freighter, which left Los Angeles December 14 for Philadelphia, was proceeding up the Delaware river for this port when she rammed the Richmond. The impact was so great the sound of the crash was heard by employees of the Vacuum Oil Company at Piquette, N. J., a half mile downstream.

Few details of the collision could be learned as the Gisla remained at the scene all night in hopes of discovering the missing members of the sunken boat's crew. The vessel is expected to dock at her pier here some this morning and make a full report of the crash.

Belgian Freighter Reported Grounded

(International News Service)
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 10.—The Belgian freighter Bolivier was aground in the Columbia river, 20 miles from Portland, Ore., according to radio advice received here early today.

The ship was not believed to be in immediate danger. The Bolivier, a 3,169 ton vessel, is owned by the Lloyd Royal Belge of Antwerp. She carries no passengers.

At the request of the flight sponsor the two girls brought their monoplane "Lady Ralph" to earth here at 5:30 p. m. yesterday. Stepping from the plane they had flown longer than any other woman had in continuous flight, the young women looked fresh and appeared to be suffering very little from the strain.

Joseph Martin, sponsor of the flight, said he had asked the girls to land due to protests from residents of the suburb of Inglewood that the plane disturbed them at night.

Short Stop Will Be Made At The Azores For Refueling Of Plane

(BULLETIN)
HAMILTON, Bermuda, Jan. 10.—Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieutenant MacLaren hopped off from Bermuda at 11:15 a. m. (New York time) today in their monoplane Tradewind, for the Azores.

The fliers arrived here last Wednesday from Hampton Roads, completing the first leg of a proposed three-hop flight to Paris, carrying a pay load. They had been held landbound here for the past two days, first because of the delay in repairing a leak in the oil tank of their plane, and then by unfavorable weather conditions over the ocean.

After a short stop in the Azores for re-fueling, the fliers plan to continue on to Paris.

Italian Plane Suffers Mishap

Twelfth Plane In Italian Squadron Crashes Into Ocean In Takeoff

(International News Service)
NATAL, Brazil, Jan. 10.—Further disaster to one of the unlucky units of General Italo Balbo's formation-flying planes was reported today in a wireless message from Fernando Noronha which said the 12th plane of the squadron crashed while trying to take off there, and sunk.

This was one of the two planes which were forced down by engine trouble off St. Peter's rocks on Jan. 6, during the flight from Bolama, Portuguese East Guinea, to Natal, and later towed to Fernando Noronha by Italian cruisers.

Ten of Balbo's planes made the crossing safely and landed at Natal. The 11th plane completed repairs at Fernando Noronha on Thursday and flew to Natal.

PA NEW OBSERVES

Letters have been received by many New Castle people asking for money for a Pittsburgh Relief fund. None of this money will be spent in New Castle, and local citizens should subscribe their money at home, where it will do the most good.

No ice on the streets this morning. No rain either. Not so very cold. Now what more could a person ask for in January?

The fire in the Walkup home in Union township last night lighted up the sky and cast a ray of light against gravestones in St. Mary's cemetery. Persons near the fire could read inscriptions on the stones from the light made by big flames.

Observed a detached street light in a North Jefferson street front yard. Pa New looked around but didn't see any street lights missing. Maybe it is a spare.

A well known minister just now told Pa New that in his opinion a smiling face is about as big a contribution to humanity as a person can give. Agreed.

Motor Club To File Protest

Will Seek To Have Viaduct Built At Edensburg

Following a decision made by the governors of the New Castle Motor Club Friday evening, arrangements will be started immediately to protest to the public service commission of Pennsylvania the grade crossings now existing at Edensburg. The club will ask that the commission order the crossings abolished and that a viaduct be established which will cross the B. & O. the P. & A. L. E. the Pennsylvania railroad, and the Mahoning river.

Some time ago the matter was first broached by the motor club and a survey made of the board of governors. The feeling seemed to be that the crossings should be eliminated, and at the meeting Friday night this feeling made itself felt in the form of a resolution authorizing the officers of the club to proceed immediately.

File Protest

There are some routine steps to be taken before the matter comes before the public service commission officially. The protest must be advertised and filed with the commission. A hearing will then be had in New Castle, to which will be invited any persons having any arguments either for or against the elimination of the grade crossings.

What will be done in the matter rests entirely with the public service commission. Should this body decide that the crossings should be eliminated, it will then pro-rate the cost among the parties liable for the crossings. Congressman J. Howard Swick has already presented a bill to the national Congress permitting a viaduct to be built at this point. This is necessary because the Mahoning river is ranked as a navigable stream and before any bridge or viaduct can be constructed the War Department must concur.

Annual Meeting

The board of governors made preliminary arrangements for the annual meeting of the club, which will be held on February 9th. At this meeting a speaker of statewide reputation will be present, although the name has not been announced as yet. The secretary's report on Friday evening shows the club to be in the best shape of its history, the membership now being almost 700.

having an overwhelming majority in the house must accept responsibility for the delay.

The bill has been held up through refusal of Rep. Laguardia (R) of New York to give unanimous consent to sending it to conference. You're the JUDGE

Running through the town of Hennypunk was the Z. V. & V. railroad. The railroad owned quite a bit of right-of-way through the town, and on some of the right-of-way was a turntable, about a hundred feet from the nearest public highway. The land around it was fenced in by the railroad and the turntable was fastened to prevent it being put in motion.

Now it had been the custom of the town boys to play on that railroad land, especially near the turntable. On this particular afternoon the boys got so energetic that one of them was thrown and badly injured. The father of the boy was greatly broken up over the accident. He believed the railroad had not sufficiently guarded the premises against trespassers and so filed suit against the railroad in behalf of his son.

A memorial to the late Dr. W. Edwin Jackson was read by the secretary. Dr. Jackson was a charter member of the New Castle chapter, S. A. R., and served for a time as its president. He died on August 15, 1930.

Music and Reading

Mrs. William J. Caldwell presented two solos, following the business session, in which she was accompanied by Mrs. Harry McKee. Mrs. Alvah M. Shumaker read "The Highwayman." President Harper then introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. John S. Duncan, D. D.

"We are prone to think only of the soldier and his exploits on the field of battle, when we think of the Revolutionary fathers," said Dr. Duncan. "The period following the Revolution was a period that tried men's souls, and according to the historian Fiske, was the most critical period of the country's history. The perils escaped were greater than those which threatened in the Civil war, and the task confronting at the close of the war was far more difficult than the one on the field of battle."

"There was no central government, no laws of navigation, no national credit, scarcely any taxation, and bitter tariff wars between states were raging. A call for a constitutional convention to meet in Philadelphia was sent out and to quote Fiske, it was one of the most memorable assemblies the world has ever seen. Woodrow Wilson said that a greater amount of political genius was never before or since gathered in one place."

Virginia Plan

"Various plans of government were set forth and then came the Virginia plan. This would have made the whole people interested without regard to state lines. The legislature was to consist of two houses, the lower to be elected by the people and the upper by the members of the house of representatives. Gradually compromises were effected and finally the constitution under which we now live was adopted."

During the address of Dr. Duncan showed the strenuous opposition to the central government plan, showed how the opposition was overcome and how after years of struggle the colonies were united under a central government, operating under the constitution. The address was a scholarly one and most appropriate to the occasion.

Dempsey Lands One On Wrestler

Acting As Referee In Bout He Uses Fist To Protect Himself

(International News Service)
DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 10.—Here primarily as a referee in a wrestling match, Jack Dempsey had staged a "comeback" as a fighter today as the result of knocking Billy Edwards, grappler, sprawling with a short right to the chin after Edwards had swung wildly at him.

Annoyed when Dempsey awarded a decision over him to Jim O'Dowd, Edwards, locally known as a tough guy on referees, swung a haymaker which barely grazed the former ring champion's chin. Dempsey calmly but promptly landed a blow which raised the wrestler off his feet and sent him hurtling head foremost to the mat.

The blow was preceded by other incidents during the wrestling match wherein Edwards ripped the shirt from Dempsey's back and all but deprived the former champion of his sliver undershirt. Dempsey was mainly irritated, but did not retaliate until Edwards actually swung on him.

Ten thousand fans drawn to the arena mainly by the mauler's presence, howled their glee as he snapped the short right that sent the wrestler sprawling. When the atmosphere cooled, a score or so of women spectators staged another impromptu battle for possession of Dempsey's torn shirt.

Bennett, Jr., or with representatives of the attorney general here, and that he would suggest a blanket writ of habeas corpus to free all of the 51 illegally imprisoned girls.

his appointment and then, by a like vote, requested the return of his nomination. The same action was taken toward Draper and Garsaud, but without record votes.

It was the first time in history the Senate has made such a request of the president after an appointee was sworn into office. It was stated on reliable authority the president would ignore all requests, but might delay a decision to bolster his refusal with an opinion from the attorney general.

Strange Impasse

If the president defies the Senate, he will provoke one of the strangest impasses in American history. It is barely possible the Senate may proceed, even without the papers, and reject the three appointees. The government disbursing officer then must decide if the commissioners may draw salaries. If he should refuse to pay them, they will be automatically ousted. Later in the year, the Senate will get an opportunity to prohibit their salaries when it acts upon their salaries.

If the president returns the nominations, he virtually abandons the three new commissioners to their fate at the hands of an unfriendly Senate. Some believe both Garsaud and Draper can be confirmed again, but not even administration leaders deny Smith would be rejected.

STAR LORE

WITHIN THE FIRST QUARTER OF THE CELESTIAL SPHERE
By Arthur DeV. Carpenter

As one looks on the celestial sphere in the direction of the celestial equator, the great hour circles are far removed from each other, but as they approach the north celestial pole they rapidly converge toward one point. This point is near the North star. So when viewing the vicinity of the circumpolar stars a degree of longitude, or rather of R. A. (Right Ascension), is but a fraction of what a degree is in the direction of the celestial equator. Within this first quarter of the celestial sphere are Aries, Andromeda, Cassiopeia, Perseus, Auriga, Taurus, Orion; and in the south polar region, the two Magellanic clouds.

$3,500. The Walkups said it was covered by insurance.

It was the second time that city firemen had responded to the home, a few yards west of the St. Mary's cemetery. Lynn recalled that on November 7 at 7:50 a. m. the city department was called and succeeded in extinguishing a fire that had started in an upstairs closet and continued to the attic.

As if to retaliate for the earlier success of the New Castle firemen, the second fire made headway before the city was called for assistance, and when firemen arrived from central and No. 6 stations the entire roof of the frame structure was ablaze.

Discovers Fire

Mrs. Hattie B. Walkup, who was found by a reporter in the William Llewellyn home in Union township early Friday evening while the fire was finishing the last skeleton remains of what had been her home, told how she had discovered the fire and summoned her husband.

"I had just stepped to the garage in the rear of the house to show the evening paper's story of the Schroefer-Dague device for feeding his rabbits. When I returned there was a fire in the back of the stove in the kitchen. The fire progressed and continued from the kitchen to other parts of the building. During the excitement Mr. Walkup, an airbrake repairman on the Pennsylvania railroad, saw the family automobile on catching on fire by driving it out of the drive, located alongside the house.

The garage was not destroyed by the fire. Chief Lynn believed the fire originated in a faulty chimney.

Mr. and Mrs. Walkup retrieved two trunks, a mattress and a radio receiver from the first floor while the fire was gaining in proportion. These were the only household goods saved from six rooms.

Flames from the Walkup home reached a wall of the William Llewellyn home located a few yards east. Firemen were put to work to have the Llewellyn home from fire after it was found the other home could not be saved.

The booster tank of central station service truck was the only reliable water supply available, since the supply of water in the district was found inadequate.

According to Lynn it appeared at first that the Llewellyn home would also be destroyed, since water was not available. Nothing could have saved the Llewellyn residence if the wooden side and roof had been fired. Chief Lynn believes.

The wells and streams in the district are dry. What little water the city firemen poured into the booster tank had caused the Llewellyn well to go dry. An attempt to get water from a nearby well was useless after it was found small progress could be made with the water that had to be dipped out and poured into buckets.

Mrs. Walkup said that while the latest fire in her home was the second to which firemen responded, it was really the third time that fire invaded the building. A previous fire was put out by the Walkups without the aid of firemen.

The last fire, which left only the foundation intact had Mr. and Mrs. Walkup and their six-year-old son, Louis Arthur, homeless.

Rev. G. M. Landis Addresses P. T. A. At Oak St. School

The Oak street P. T. A. met Friday afternoon at 2:30 in the school library with Mrs. Leonard Cramer presiding.

The meeting was opened by prayer, followed by the children of the fourth, fifth and sixth grades leading the parents in the singing of P. T. A. songs.

The following program was presented by the children of the school: A group of songs, grades 4, 5, 6, under the direction of Miss Grace Eakin.

Recitations, children from Miss Anna Dodd's class, Leslie Kemp, "The Quaker Boy," Jean Leshner, "Smiles," Louis Southern, "Bird's Breakfast."

Mrs. Kenneth Butler gave a lovely vocal solo, "Dear Little Boy of Mine." She was accompanied by Mrs. Howard P. Meehan.

The speaker of the afternoon was Rev. George M. Landis, who gave a splendid address on "Power." Rev. Landis told of the different kinds of power. Knowledge is power, and our schools are giving our children the education that increases knowledge, thereby increasing power. However, the more power the more control needed. The emphasis must be put on character to control power. The most effective way of developing character is through spiritual observance. Rev. Landis used very effectively the illustration of the automobile in connection with power. He said that the parents and teachers must combine to furnish four-wheel brakes for the children.

MUSCLE SHOALS—AND GOVERNMENT OPERATION

FOR a year or so the Muscle Shoals controversy has been deadlocked in a conference committee. The senate has demanded government operation. The house has stood for a lease to private management. Both the manufacture of fertilizer and electric power are involved. Tentatively the house confers have agreed to put the government in business to the extent of constructing and operating transmission lines to be financed from the sale of power. Whether the house would ratify such an agreement is a question. The belief in Washington is that, even if passed, the president would veto the bill. He should.

The business transacted by the government would be comparatively small, since the demand for power from Muscle Shoals would come from a limited territory. It is the policy that is at stake, not the scope of operations. So much has been said about Muscle Shoals, so long has the dispute been carried on, that the plant has been associated in the public mind with government ownership and operation as a general principle of grave importance.

There is an element in congress that is tending strongly toward direct government management upon a constantly increasing scale. Included in this group is the radical Senator Brookhart of Iowa. Brookhart has a bill—two bills, in fact. One forbids any railroad consolidation unless it extends from the Atlantic to the Pacific. This is aimed, of course, at the merger affecting trunk lines east of the Mississippi. The other authorizes the Interstate Commerce Commission to acquire and operate a line extending from coast to coast. The plan is for the government to enter into direct competition with existing roads.

It is beyond belief that the congress of the United States could possibly agree to such a scheme, destructive as it is of private initiative. Stockholders—and they are numbered by the hundreds of thousands—would be wiped out. The field of investment would be restricted. Private management requires efficiency. Government management runs to extravagance. Yet from government operation of Muscle Shoals to government management of railroads is only a step. Subsequent steps would lead to government ownership and operation of other public utilities. What would be left for private enterprise except ordinary industrial pursuits?

This country has had one experience of government management of the railroads of the land. Surely that was enough. The roads, when restored, were in a deplorable condition, many of them verging on bankruptcy. Railroads run by the Interstate Commerce Commission would be under the actual control of congress, and that would mean political interference, with all the waste that would inevitably accompany it.

The Federal Shipping Board was created to establish American commerce, but there was no thought of making it permanent. Indeed, the board was ordered to get out of business as rapidly as possible, and is doing so. It is selling ships to private corporations. But the proposition of Senator Brookhart is an entirely different matter. He would enter the government into active competition with the great railroad lines, with the undoubted intention, when such competition had broken them down, of turning them all over to the government.

The scheme would be dangerous were there any possibility that it could succeed. It will be strangled in committee, of course. Public sentiment would consent to nothing else. But it reveals the motives that are actuating some senators—Philadelphia Inquirer.

WINGS

More than four centuries ago Leonardo da Vinci made a prophecy: "There shall be wings." Fulfillment of that prophecy by the Wright brothers makes it most appropriate that the words of the Italian genius be inscribed upon the imposing memorial to be erected at Kitty Hawk, N. C., in commemoration of their epochal achievement.

Already the design for the monument has been chosen, a triangular pillar resting on a base the shape of the star that distinguishes the military and naval planes of the United States. At first it was proposed that the monument take the form of a lighthouse, but the accepted design contemplates no utilitarian purpose to detract from the tribute to the inventors of the heavier-than-air flying machine.

This monument is destined to become a shrine to air-minded pilgrims from near and far. And as the nation takes more and more to the air the monument and the achievement for which it stands will take on a new significance. The world now knows that the Wright brothers started something that has assumed vaster proportions than even they dreamed of and that the frail contraption which took to the air at Kitty Hawk was the forerunner of a new and greater transportation system.

This generation smiles at the air-ignorance of the world in those Kitty Hawk days. It considers itself air-conscious. Tomorrow magnetic currents of the air may be harnessed to propel the craft of the air and flying may become as instinctive as motoring now is. If so, picture if you can the tolerant amusement with which these times will then be regarded.

It is hard to meet your bills, but harder to avoid them.

HERE'S A FUNNY ONE

The law firm of Howe & Hummel enjoyed the distinction of being the most successful firm of criminal lawyers in New York. The murderer, the burglar, the blackmailer, the embezzler who came to them with fee in hand, had more than an even chance of getting a verdict of acquittal. Hummel, tried the cases and in his summing up could bring tears from a stockbroker. Just prior to one of their important cases which was to be tried, the case of a thief was called. The thief, pleading poverty, informed the Court that he was unable to engage a lawyer. In such cases, it is the custom of the Court to appoint one of the lawyers who happens to be present in the courtroom, preferably, one of the younger attorneys recently admitted to the bar. Looking around the room, the Judge was about to call on a young attorney, when Hummel came strutting in, followed by an array of clerks carrying the green bags in which lawyers of the nineties were wont to carry their books and papers. "Mr. Hummel," called the Judge, grinning beneath his mustache, "appoint you as the attorney for the defendant in this case." Hummel stopped short in his tracks, then, like a good sport, the dapper little lawyer bowed gracefully, came forward, interviewed the defendant for a minute or two and announced his readiness to proceed. It is needless to say that the jury brought in a prompt verdict of acquittal, whereas the ex-defendant came forward to express his gratitude to the witness. "I haven't any money, Mr. Hummel," he said, "but I want to make you a present of something if you will tell me what you would like." To get rid of the man, Hummel tried to think of some small token. "Why, give me—er—give me—er—Just then he noticed the Judge looking at his watch. "You can give me at watch—one like the Judge is wearing," he answered, turning to the papers spread before him.

Two days later, the matter was entirely forgotten, when Hummel, again in court, was approached by his moneyless client, who, beaming with pleasure, handed the lawyer a watch, and with a few more grateful words, departed. Hummel put the watch in his pocket and gave it no further thought for the moment. His case was on and the attorney for the other side was addressing the jury. Hummel appeared bored and absently took the watch out of his pocket. It was a nice watch. He opened the case. There were the initials engraved in the twisted tangles that were the fashion of the time. He tried to pick out the letters and with some difficulty, finally succeeded. But they were not his initials. He put the watch back. The opposing lawyer finished his address. The examination was on. Throughout the examinations and cross examinations, the strange initials in the watch danced twistily before his mind. Try as he would, he could not forget them. It was annoying and might cost him the case. The lawyer for the other side asked the witness a question. "I object!" shouted Hummel. "Objection overruled!" snapped the Judge, as he glowered at Hummel. The Judge was not in a pleasant mood. Hummel glowered back. The breaks were against him today. As they were glowering at each other, something suddenly flashed into Hummel's mind. His eyes lit up. He could hardly keep from laughing aloud. The glower in the Judge's eyes passed out and a look of wonder took its place. Hummel drew the silk handkerchief from the side pocket of his coat and held it to his mouth. It had just come to him. The initials. They were the Judge's!

WHAT ARE YOUR BRASS TACKS?

As long as I can remember I have heard people saying, "Well, let's get down to Brass Tacks!" And, whenever they've said that they meant: "Let's see what the disagreeable facts are!"

They meant: "The facts are that you played hooky instead of going to school."

They meant: "In plain English, you didn't do what you said you would."

They meant: "The truth of it is that you're broke. You owe $500 and you haven't more than a dollar to your name."

They meant: "What really happened is that the girl you love ran away with another fellow."

That's what Brass Tacks has always meant to people—unpalatable; annoying situations they'd like to avoid, but don't see how they can. The "REAL" things.

But Brass Tacks might just as well mean something else. There's no lay compelling them to mean the seamy side of the situation. They might mean the more cheerful side too—the OTHER SIDE.

Brass Tacks when you are broke, might mean that you still have health and youth—or, if you are old, that you enjoyed your money while you had it.

Brass Tacks if you are miserable, might mean that even this unhappy period will pass away and next week you will be happy again.

They might mean that because one person has proved untrue, not ALL will be as false.

Good food, a comfortable bed, a fine friend, a kindness, a pleasant memory, a sturdy digestion, a great book, sweet singing, rare music, a dog's wagging tail, a perfect flower, a chirping bird, a clever actor, a chuckling baby, a good vacation, interesting work, family affection—all these may be counted as Brass Tacks, too, because they are just as real as the hard-luck side of life.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

GOLD-A HEAVY BURDEN

Two rather nasty failures have occurred in Hollywood, California. One, a California State Bank, and the other a Building and Loan Association. The Bank failure was caused by just bad banking. The Bank had been started and conducted by a man who had no previous experience in banking. The Building and Loan Association failure was the result of theft of some $8,000,000 by its principal officer. Such failures always cause uneasiness among the neighboring bank depositors, but no serious effect has followed in Hollywood—the only suffering by those who have lost, but even among these tears, there are hilarious moments.

A scared depositor came into a branch bank in Hollywood and insisted on drawing out all his money—amounting to something over $20,000.00. He indignantly refused to take greenbacks; even the United States Treasury Notes didn't look good to him.

The Bank had to send downtown for the gold. It arrived in an armored car. It was in $5 gold pieces. The paying teller spent an hour counting it over; then the depositor insisted on counting it himself. He had arrived at 10 o'clock in the morning; it was nearly 7 when he finally collected his gold in a sack that looked big enough for a peddler's pack.

The paying teller said that he saw the man standing in the counting room with his sack of gold—looking uncertain and unhappy—so minutes afterwards he noticed a familiar figure at the receiving teller's window. The unhappy gentleman was over at the next window putting his gold all back in the bank again.

Discussion Of Rail Mergers Shows Wide Public Support

Establishing Of Four Main Groups Considered Logical Solution Of Problem, Though Details Are Viewed As Debatable

Indorsement by rail executives of a proposed grouping of Eastern railroads into four main systems is received with much approval by the public. Consolidation efforts have been so slow in achieving results that the present development is classed as genuine progress toward solution of the rail problem. President Hoover's efforts in the matter, while opposed by Senator Couzens, are upheld in various comments. A factor in the situation is the predicted effect on business conditions, while the increased competition from other forms of transportation is believed to have contributed to the agreement.

"Aside from the employment that may be furnished by new construction to make the proposed consolidation most effective," says the NEW YORK SUN, "the country will benefit from the mergers by their businesslike administration." The CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER feels that "it is well within the facts to say that the proposed merger in the trunk line territory is born of depression"; that "it is probably not too much to say that it is born of the necessity of self-preservation." The CHAMPAIGN NEWS-GAZETTE holds that "if this system can weather a strong congress, it will kindle confidence in the future of American railroads, and should be a generally effective tonic for 1931's business."

"The prospect of such an improvement is most favorably upon the country's general business," agrees the JERSEY CITY JOURNAL, while the ST. LOUIS TIMES voices the opinion that "if the new plan is adopted, the railroads will give a better service," and the CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR declares: "To the lines involved it will mean financial stability. It should open the way for improvements which will better the unemployment situation, while the elimination of unreasonable competition should be of benefit to shippers and carriers alike."

Changing that Senator Couzens' "criticism of President Hoover's implied support of the plan agreed upon is unwarranted and unfair," the CHARLESTON (S. C.) EVENING POST states: "The President insists out that the Interstate Commerce Commission has no authority in itself to require consolidation, but that this can be brought about by voluntary agreement of the railroad companies. That such an agreement has been reached is and should be a source of satisfaction to the President as it should be to Senator Couzens. It does not follow that the plan is so designed that it will meet the requirements of the public interest, but it can hardly be doubted that it is a long step toward some sort of stabilization of the railroad situation, the need of which can certainly not be denied even by Senator Couzens."

"A dream which has been indulged in by some of the country's most sagacious transportation experts for many years is at last in the way of being realized," remarks the SALT LAKE DESERET NEWS, and the CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, pointing out that "the details remain to be justified, if that be possible," advises: "The question, after all, is one of fact. Not the Interstate Commerce Commission alone, but Congressional committees, will demand evidence of public benefit—and of benefit to the railroads, whose executives are clamoring for sanctions before proposed mergers are sanctioned. Doubtless the executives concerned are preparing definite statements setting forth the economies and service improvements envisaged by them as the result of the proposed consolidation."

"The fact that executives of the four systems have tentatively agreed to a four-trunk-line plan of consolidation," in the judgment of the ROANOKE WORLD-NEWS, "enormously advances a project which has been before the country in one form or another ever since the railroads were returned to their owners after the period of government wartime operation."

Speaking for Pennsylvanians who are interested, the PITTSBURGH POST-GAZETTE advises that "it is plain that, although progress has been made toward consolidation, there still are important features to discuss." The ROCK ISLAND ARGUS offers the warning: "In his announcement of the agreement, Mr. Hoover said it provided for the protection of the interests of the employees, with full consideration of the interests of communities and the protection of the public interest. But labor is concerned about a merger of shops and terminals which might involve a reduction of the force of employees. Senators Couzens of Michigan and Wheeler of Montana both cite the proposed Northern Pacific and Great Northern merger, saying that if the eastern merger is like that they cannot support it. Senator Wheeler's statement that 'it is up to the railroads to prove that their plan is in the public interest and would care for the employees' does not appear to be unreasonable."

Whether or not the plan adopted shall prove to be ideal is wholly satisfactory," says the PHILADELPHIA EVENING BULLETIN. "It may be assumed that it will bring some advantages. President Hoover is credited with an expression of approval. He had urged the railroad interests to get together and work out their problem. Apparently, under the reported agreement, all hands get the sort of work they want."

DO YOU GOVERN YOURSELF?

A word to young persons. If you were given rope, just how far would you go in anything?

Would you be discriminating and selective in your acquaintances?

Would you become too familiar on short acquaintances?

Would you spend more money than you would if you were earning it?

Would you be grasping and greedy in making a bargain?

Would you eat the foods and drink the beverages that you have been taught are injurious to your constitution?

How far can you be trusted when it comes to curbing your possible desires or your inclination under pressure?

Would you say "No" and stand by it if pastimes or pleasures were suggested by your crowd that you would not care to tell your mother about?

Would you be false to a friend and untruthful when questioned about it?

There are the questions many parents are asking as they send their children away to college or out in life to earn their living.

The man or the woman who can govern self can govern others.

If you can't govern yourself you are going to be an underling as soon as this becomes known. Sooner or later all get what they deserve.

A splendid program was in charge of Mrs. Manley Bates. Mrs. Stanley Reese spoke on "Comparing Homes Today With Those of the Past"—what has been lost—what gained. She stressed the fact that better buildings and electrical apparatus leads up to the fact that mothers have more time to devote to their children.

ROBERT HOOSE Robert Hoose, as the youngest of the Winslow family in Philip Barry's comedy, "The Youngest", to be presented Thursday next by the graduating class of the senior high school, plays the title role. "Bob" is prominent in high school athletics, being a member of the 'varsity' football squad. As winner of the district contest for the annual national oratorical contest, he creditably represented the local school and the district in the regional contest in Pittsburgh last year. His stage presence, his enunciation and his voice modulation are an enviable accomplishment. Young Mr. Hoose's numerous friends anticipate seeing him in the role of "the youngest" repeat in the coming class play add one more to the list of his previous successes.

Girl-Bride Promises To Wait For Husband While He Serves Term

Young Girl-Bride, Expectant Mother, Weds Man Who Faces 15 Years Stretch

Former Reynoldsville Girl Suffers Agony In Detroit Jail Wedding

BY MILTON M. MURRAY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

DETROIT, Jan. 10.—"I'll stick, Fred. I'll wait for you."

"Be nice, kid!"

Married—only to be separated immediately—Fred Niepoorte, ex-policeman bandit, and his new girl-bride, Mrs. Lola Rhoades Niepoorte, aged 22, formerly of Reynoldsville, Pa., today had exchanged this farewell behind the bars of the Wayne county jail here.

Expected Child Soon

The bride, an expectant mother, she says, and weeping bitterly at the tragedy of being separated, was led from the county jail by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Jane McBride, to face the long years she plans to wait for her husband—and to await the arrival of the child which she soon expects.

Wedding of the bandit and his sweetheart, who stood by him despite his confession of wholesale robbery and theft, was performed in the chapel of the county jail by Judge James M. Jefferies of common pleas court. Sheriff Henry Behrendt was best man and Mrs. McBride acted as matron of honor. A silent and sympathetic audience of matrons and deputy sheriffs watched the ceremony.

Cannot Keep Promise

As Judge Jefferies read the marriage service, "—Will you live with her after God's holy ordinance and promise to love her, comfort her, keep her in sickness and health and forsake all others—" a flashlight illuminated the dim prison chapel and the spectators stirred in realization that this man could not keep the promise he had pledged himself to.

The wedding climaxed two days

Nye Committee Still Hopes To Force Davis Out

Battle To Remove Senator James J. Davis Will Be Renewed

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Efforts of the senate campaign funds committee to have the senate oust Senator James J. Davis (R) of Pennsylvania from the seat he took last December 1, will be renewed within the next ten days, Senator Nye (R) North Dakota, chairman of the committee, said today.

He said Davis, formerly secretary of labor, should be deprived of his seat for excessive campaign expenditures. Davis had no comment today.

Spent Over Million.

The committee Nye said, has found that the Davis-Brown (Francis Shunk Brown, defeated gubernatorial candidate) ticket spent about $1,200,000 in the primary and general election.

Nye tried to bar Davis from the senate the very day he appeared with credentials certifying his election. He introduced a resolution demanding that the senate refuse the oath to Davis but it was defeated by a vote of 58 to 27.

Davis was elected to the seat to which William S. Vare was elected in 1926 but was barred from entering the senate because he spent $750,000 during his campaign. Frank Smith, of Illinois, spent slightly less than Vare and was denied his seat while a few years before that Truman H. Newberry (R) of Michigan was dropped from the senate after his friends admitted they spent $195,000 for his election.

OVER HUNDRED AT STORY HOUR

Library Story Hour Friday Evening Is Attended By 107 Boys And Girls

After school classes on Friday evening 107 children from various grade schools of the city wended their way enthusiastically to the New Castle free public library.

They knew what was in store for them. Miss Alice Joyce, the children's librarian, would tell them stories—tales of fairies and goblins and witches and princesses and animals.

And so they all gathered during the three story periods, in the attractive children's room in the library basement, and gave their rapt and undivided attention to the thrilling stories, "Mighty Mikko" and "Foolish Jim, Clever James". "Mighty Mikko" was the story of a poor boy who had a wealth of ingenuity that impressed a king and finally won himself as a bride the charming and attractive princess. Equally interesting was the other story and the poem, "Three Little Foxes".

Children like poems, Miss Joyce has found, and they look forward to the poem just about as eagerly as they look forward to the stories. "Three Little Foxes" scored a hit. The eager listeners thought the idea of having each line rhyme with the word "foxes" was quite cute indeed.

Supreme Head Of Ahepa Is Coming

Will Attend Installation Ceremonies Here On Sunday Afternoon

One of the most distinguished members of the Ahepa, the national Greek-American organization, will be in New Castle Sunday afternoon to assist in the installation of officers, in the person of V. I. Chebithes, three times the supreme president of the Order of Ahepa. Mr. Chebithes has promised to attend the installation services and will undoubtedly speak.

He was born on the Island of Icaria, November 15, 1891, and attended school as far as the fourth grade. In April 1906 he came to America and went to live with an uncle in Somerset, Ky., but later he went to live with a Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Gragg. Having no children they took him in and educated him in the public schools of Pulaski county. Later he entered the Somerset Kentucky high school graduating with honors.

Following his graduation he attended Center college in Danville, Ky., and was a member of the Center football team. In his college work he was active in oratorical and debate activities and for two years was the winner of the Inter-Society and Kentucky Intercollegiate debating prizes and was elected orator of his class.

Mr. Chebithes served as a sergeant in the world war, and in 1919 went to Washington, D. C., as an examiner in the Patent Office. He studied law at the same time and in 1922 began the practice of law. In 1924 he was elected Supreme President of the Order of Ahepa and served three terms.

The installation of officers for the New Castle chapter Sunday afternoon will see Speer Marousis, one of the pioneers in Ahepan circles here, installed as president. The installation is open to the public and following it, a dinner will be held in the Greek church on Reynolds street.

Council Continues To Revise Valuations

Council convened Friday afternoon and worked until late on the Second ward tax assessments. No frontage valuation was decided on Washington street property. A tilt occurred between the revisionists and the Chief Assessor Bion Cover when they lowered the assessment on his lot and house in Neshaunock avenue.

He objected to the members lowering his assessment, adding: "I want to have written on the records that this was not done at my request. When assessments were made in the Second ward I did not believe there would be any cuts. I want you to leave the assessment the way it was made."

Councilman Stanley Treser declared: "You'll be hanged for this." J. B. Clashed and declared: "You all will find out who will be hanged for this." Treser retorted: "No one is going to make a monkey out of me and we're going to cut this assessment."

The lot in 1927 was assessed at $1560. Cover raised it to $1850 and the board lowered it to $1500. The house was assessed in 1927 at $4500 and Cover raised it to $5380. The board cut house assessments to $5,000, and the board considered the action closed.

Wakely Tells About Safety Campaign By Inspection Bureau

Greatest Number Of Industrial Accidents Occur In March
And October

News of the no-accident drive during March and October of this year under the auspices of the Bureau of Inspection of the Department of Labor and Industry was told by J. B. Wakely, inspector of industrial plants in this district for the Bureau of Inspection.

"Knock Off the Peaks" will be the slogan of the 1931 campaign. The months of March and October are reported after long surveys to be the months during which the greatest of industrial accidents occur. A graph of accidents in general industry in Pennsylvania, prepared by the Bureau of Statistics, covering a ten-year period, shows distinct peaks in March and October. Wakely is making a safety record survey of plants in this district.

A two-day state-wide safety contest will be held in Harrisburg on February 19 and 20 to lend inspiration to the 1931 campaign. According to Harry D. Immel, director of the Bureau of Inspection, Pennsylvania labor and industry revealed in the state-wide safety campaign of 1929 and again in 1930 a fine spirit of cooperation with the Department of Labor and Industry. Encouraged by the reception of its previous safety activities, the Bureau appeals to labor and industry to lend the same support to a more concentrated safety drive in 1931.

The plan of this year's campaign is to focus safety energies upon two months which stand out as averaging the greatest number of accidents over a period of ten years. It is planned to make these months, March and October, no accident months in 1931.

There is another accident peak in August, but the mid-summer season is not considered a suitable time for the most effective safety campaigning. The mid-summer accident increase, attributed to construction activities, vacation season substitutions, and lowered vitality of workers must, it is felt, be attacked in another way.

Undoubtedly the March and October accident peaks are accounted for by increased employment and greater production in these periods. But the fact remains that these are the months that average highest in accidents, and logically, measures to combat these increases should have a special appeal.

The Bureau of Inspection proposes to call upon safety agencies throughout the state to develop such details of the non-accident drives in March and October as appear best applicable to the different localities. In a season of industrial depression the Bureau offers its 1931 safety campaign as a practical contribution toward economic rehabilitation through elimination of the needless waste of accidents.

It is realized that no-accident drives in March and October may not exactly meet the needs of all of Pennsylvania's greatly diversified industries, but it is hoped that all will lend themselves to an undertaking which promises much for the common good.

Suit Of Armor Worn By Worker

ALTOONA, Pa., Jan. 10.—L. A. Hughes a car builder in the local shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, has designed a suit of armor to wear while at work.

The armor consists of a metal apron hinged at the waist, and metal guards for the legs above the knees. Hughes' work requires him to drive hot rivets while underneath car sides. To protect himself from the rivets and sparks falling on him, he constructed the armor of light scrap sheet metal sewed together with wire.

Hughes claims his armor affords him greater protection and security than the canvas aprons worn by fellow riveters.

Trade Head Sees Upward Trend Due In March

Indications Are That Better
Times Are In Prospect

(International News Service)
BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 10.—A steady and general upward trend in the return of prosperity during the first few months of 1931 was forecast by Harry C. Knight, of New Haven, Conn., president of the New England Council.

Although the business depression was international in scope and more severe than anticipated, President Knight declared that New England was not affected as seriously as some of the sections of the country.

Reports from the United States Department of Labor indicate that industrial employment and payrolls have not declined quite as much, month by month, in New England as in the rest of the country," said Knight. "Activity in our major lines of industry has been, however, considerably below normal levels. The textile industry, already in a period of readjustment when the general downward movement began, has operated during 1930 at about 30 per cent below the 1929 level."

Food and shoe production has been 14 per cent below last year, said Knight, with slightly more than season activity prevailing at the present time.

"Our movement of merchandise, as indicated by the volume of car-loadings of merchandise and miscellaneous freight, has been from 12 to 15 per cent below the 1929 volume."

New England's agriculture has had a fairly satisfactory year. Although prices have been lower than in 1929 growing conditions were good and crop yields generally somewhat larger than during the previous year. Rural areas have been little affected by the decline in industrial activity.

"At the present time the indications are that the bottom of the depression has been reached. There is real evidence that the price stabilization is taking place. It is true that price declines are still being registered but they are small and irregular. Production has been adjusted downward. Stocks of raw and manufactured products are gradually being diminished. Money rates are low and acute stringency has disappeared," continued President Knight.

"During previous depressions business activity has remained at or near the low point for approximately three months. If history repeats itself the beginning of definite recovery is not likely before March."

"No rapid recovery from this depression is anticipated but study of previous depressions justifies the belief that the general trend during 1931 will be gradually upward. In the past it has taken from thirteen to nineteen months for business to regain normal levels once the upward movement has definitely begun. If this holds true in the present situation we can look for gradual steady improvement through 1931, with normal levels being reached in 1932."

Answers to questions on information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, O., and enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions, nor will the estimated value of old coins be given.

THE QUESTION BOX

When is Michaelmas? What was its origin?

Michaelmas is the old English name of the day set apart in commemoration of St. Michael and the other angels, Sept. 29. The observance of this day is commonly traced to an apparition of the archangel which is supposed to have taken place on Monte Gargano in Apulia in 493, or more probably in 520; but it is likely, for various reasons, that the festival is even older. In England it has been for centuries an important date as a quarter day and the beginning of legal and university terms.

What was the Russian duma? The duma was the lower house of the Russian parliament which existed before the Revolution. The first duma, or general representative council, met in 1906.

Where is Duke Humphrey's Walk? The middle aisle of old St. Paul's in London is called Duke Humphrey's Walk for the reason that Duke Humphrey's tomb is said to be there. The old saying of "dining with Duke Humphrey" was in allusion to persons who walked there during dinner time.

When was the Eiffel Tower erected, and who was the engineer? Was the building of the tower a private enterprise, or did the government of France finance it?

The Eiffel Tower was erected in 1889 by the famous engineer, Alexandre Gustave Eiffel. The cost of the tower was estimated at considerably over $1,500,000, of which about $292,000 was voted by the government, while the remainder was supplied by M. Eiffel, who trusted for his reimbursement to the receipts from admission fees during the 20 years he was entitled to the profits of the tower. The profits for the year, 1889, alone nearly paid for the cost of the tower.

What was the first impeachment in the history of the United States? What was the verdict?

William Blount, one of the first two senators from Tennessee, who was accused of treason and sedition, in having plotted to aid Great Britain in wresting Florida and the Louisiana territory from Spain, was the first person to be impeached in the history of the United States. President John Adams, on July 3, 1797, asked the house and senate for an inquiry. The senate, 25 to 1, expelled Blount, July 8, 1797. The house, Dec. 4, 1797, impeached him, and the impeachment trial began Dec. 17, 1798. Blount's counsel claimed that the senate had lost jurisdiction when it expelled the senator from Tennessee. The senate, Jan. 10, 1799, by vote of 14 to 11, agreed to that view and dismissed the impeachment.

HOME HOUSING OVER HUNDRED

Record Number Of People Residing At Lawrence County Home At Present

More people than any time previously, are being housed and fed at the Lawrence County Home according to Mrs. Perry Snyder, matron. At the present time 111 men, women and children are residing there. Of this number, 17 are women and girls. The rest are men. There are 4 children.

In addition to that number between 7 and 10 men are given lodging every night, according to Mrs. Snyder. These transients are also given meals.

On Friday night, the hospital ward was used by some of the inmates of the home. This is the first time since the building of the institution that the hospital ward has been used for lodging by men who are in good health.

The hospital ward is large, the rooms excellent, and Mrs. Snyder decided that, since it is not always occupied, it might just as well be used by the residents of the home. At the present time there are 14 people in this part of the building, none of whom are very ill, nor have diseases. They are able to get around, but are weaker than the others and lie in bed a good deal.

A number of new beds have been received and have been put into shape for use.

The younger women help some with the work. The men do the firing and odd jobs about the building. Reading and talking are how they spend most of the time.

One night last year there were 100 people housed at the county home. That was the record number until this winter.

The county home is located several miles from New Castle, on the New Castle-Ellwood City road.

Non-Irritating Diet Necessary For Mucous Colitis Sufferers

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Many people who believe their colons are sluggish, eat a great deal of roughage and are constantly bloated and uncomfortable and have a tight feeling in the abdomen. This is because they really have highly sensitive and irritable colons, and in order to be comfortable and have sufficient elimination need all opposite type of diet.

They are nearly always uncomfortable on a high residue diet, and although this gives them regular evacuations, it irritates the inside of the bowel so much that they always feel a sense of pressure or incomplete emptying. Often they take to cathartics to get rid of this full feeling, and the cathartics still further irritate an already sensitive mucous lining of the colon.

Such are the cases which have come lately to be called colitis. It is more a nerve irritability than an actual inflammation of the colon (as the word colitis would indicate). But some cases go on to an extreme functional condition—mucous colitis.

For these individuals the question of a daily evacuation is of secondary importance. They require to be made comfortable and must have a "smooth" or non-residue diet. Such a diet, containing sufficient residue for such intestines is as follows:

Cereals: All kinds except bran foods. Oatmeal should be cooked in a double boiler at least one hour. May have cream and sugar.

Bread: Toast, crackers, stale bread, zwieback.

Eggs: Coddle, boiled, poached or scrambled over water—usually two a day.

Meats: Lean meat only. No pork or pickled meats. Meats should include beef (broiled steak, boiled or baked) or stewed or baked chicken, broiled or baked fish, broiled or baked liver. May have two slices of crisp bacon a day.

Soups: Cream soups, strained vegetables or lean meat broth.

Fruits: Orange juice or grapefruit juice (with sugar if desired).

Dairy products: Buttermilk, cottage cheese, butter.

Miscellaneous: Noodles, macaroni, spaghetti (no tomato sauce).

Desserts: Rice, gelatin (made with strained fruit juices if desired). May have fruit, jellies, tapioca, rice pudding (without raisins), vanilla ice cream, ices, sugar cookies, angel food cake, stick candy.

Beverages: One cup coffee a day. One cup tea a day (unless contraindicated). Water in abundance.

Avoid: Sweet milk, fats (except butter and cream) fried foods, pancakes, condiments, spiced foods, pickled meats, pork, syrups, jams, soda fountain drinks, iced drinks, cider, salads, vegetables, fruits (except apples).

cept as ordered) all pastries (except as ordered).

Editor's Note: Three pamphlets and three articles by Dr. Clending can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin for each pamphlet and 2 cents in coin for each article, with a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Dr. Logan Clending in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, Ohio. The pamphlets are: "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding" and "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes." The articles are: "Normal Diet," "Diet of the Expectant Mother," and "Tuberculosis."

Peter's Adventures

BIG STOCK AND SENTINEL

The Sentinel stood aside to let Peter pass, but the boy noticed her gazing at his spear, and read her mind. Evidently the cautious Ant didn't approve of letting a stranger with such a dangerous weapon within the walls of the city. But she was under orders. Her's not to reason why. As he went by Peter heard Sentinel mutter

"I don't like it at all. I don't. Commander may think she knows what she is doing, but trouble will come of letting the armed Two-Legs into this hill. I'll be bound."

"I've heard of 'The Big Stick' and I've got it. Mighty good thing I picked it up. And the ants are afraid of it and they'll leave me alone as long as I have it. But once let them get it away from me and I'd be in a fix! They don't care a whoop for me. It's my trusty weapon they have a wholesome respect for."

On and on and on went Commander. Peter at her heels. Would they never come to the end of the gloomy passage, so exactly like the corridor through which he had walked with Busy. Dear Busy! For her sake he had "put his head into the mouth of the dragon." Would he find his old friend at his journey's end? The slave came to a full stop and Peter bumped into her with a force that brought the boy out of the brown study into which he had fallen thinking of the lost Black Ant.

"Here we are, Mistress," said the faithful slave, carefully putting Commander Red Ant upon the ground.

The Parent Problem

by GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Parents Can Achieve Success With Program Doctor Myers Advises

Tells Fathers And Mothers To Work Out Problems By Code Of Principles, Ruling Out Pleading, Scolding

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D., Head Division Parental Education Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

I get a good many letters which have paragraphs in them like this: "We have explained, reasoned, pleaded, threatened, scolded, spanked, whipped and even ignored with no results." While not many parents are so honest as to describe their own conduct toward their children in this vivid fashion, this description would fit thousands of them. The element of uncertainty in it applies, in some small degree at least, to all parents.

One thing we will all agree to, namely, that we parents should do more thinking about our specific problems with our children, try to find out just what the trouble is and try to work out in our imagination methods of procedure which we are morally certain would bring results. How fine if we could discipline ourselves to make no command, administer no punishment whose effect we had not beforehand carefully calculated. But most troublesome things in our children arise so quickly that we do not have time to deliberate, or at least we think we don't. We would have time practically always, but the urge for action is so overwhelming that we then are not inclined to deliberate. Usually we are then under so complete rule of our feelings as not to be very reasonable.

More likely are we, therefore, to be successful and to avoid impulsive action and decision if we parents, father and mother, will often sit down together at quiet times, away from the children, and think through certain principles we are going to accept and to practice them in naming numerous concrete things which have constantly come up which are likely to arise often again, assigning them to the principles and rules of action we had agreed upon. Then when such situations arise in the future we will remember where they belong and how we had agreed to deal with them.

Always, moreover, new ones will arise which we never before had thought about or classified. Then our skill and wisdom will be tried in our efforts to classify consistently and to hold ourselves rigidly by this decision. In that event, when we are not quite sure what to do, we will do nothing. Our worst failures come from our tendency to shift even in the same situation; for example, the child is about to do something you object to. You reason with him, request, coax and then forbid. If you set out to reason and request, stick to that method. In the event, then, he decides against you, very well. BUT don't turn to commanding and, therefore, to compulsion in the same situation. Otherwise all requests tend to presage commands and the child given the opportunity to choose, discovers that he has been duped. If, instead, you, as you look ahead, are pretty sure the child will not accede to your request, but will obey if you command, and if, of course, you are sure the thing must be done, you will command in the first place and see the matter through, making disobedience sufficiently unpleasant that it is not likely to recur.

You parents who together do a great deal of thinking and planning in respect to your children, will, no doubt, agree to rule out coaxing, pleading, scolding, shaming, whipping and, except for a few specific instances with very young children, spanking. Whatever your procedure, have a carefully thought through program which you both agree to and stick to, with religious fervor.

Local Plumbers Get $54,000 Job

Andrews Firm Here Wins College Dormitory Work At Grove City

Frank P. Andrews and Son, New Castle plumbers was awarded the heating and plumbing contract for the new $350,000 boys' dormitory to be erected immediately on the Grove City college campus, it is announced. The Andrews bid amounted to nearly $54,000.

The Industrial Electric company at New Brighton, which submitted the lowest electrical work bid, was awarded that contract. An announcement, made here Friday, said excavation work requiring an additional force of workers would commence shortly. The work this summer is expected to furnish employment for 200 men, besides the groups already employed on the new science and chapel buildings.

The general contract for the work, announced last week, went to the R. B. McDannel company, New Brighton.

Foster's Weather Forecast

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Severe storms expected to cross continent during week centering on 7 will bring to a close the period of mild weather and following this storm center one of the most severe cold waves of Winter will be expected to cover North America centering on 10. Storm wave of moderate force, expected to cross continent during week centering on 13, will also be a cold breeder, causing ten day period, 17 to 17, to average below normal temperatures and above normal precipitation generally over the continent. As moderate storm wave crosses continent during week centering on 20, temperatures will move to higher averages and remain above normal during balance of month. While storm force will remain above normal during balance of January, storms of last half of month will be expected to cause warm waves during passage of storm centers and will not be followed by severe cold waves as was expected with storms of 7 and 13.

Principal evaporation point that will furnish moisture for North America during the winter months is located southwest of the continent; minor evaporation point during January is situated along west coast; these conditions will be expected to cause heaviest precipitation in Gulf states and in west part of continent during January and February, furnishing ample moisture for early southern planting. Early spring moisture will be general and I do not expect any large area to be short of moisture during spring planting season; before the crop season of 1931 is over, however, a large part of North America will be entirely too dry for best results, but not a drought such as 1930 brought us.

Inter-Planetary Force

All inter-planetary lines of force move toward the sun, the controlling center of our solar system. The effect that inter-planetary force from outer planets has upon the earth is not the same as that caused by contact with the inner planets. Force moving from outer planets, when contact is made with the earth, passes thru the earth, whereas contact with inner planets drains force from the earth toward the sun. Such lines of force are not stopped by little things like the earth, moon or other planets, but pass thru such bodies as easily as thru the air. Experiments made in this office during the past fifty years prove that such lines of force affect the earth and its weather both where they enter the earth and on the opposite side where they leave the earth. A ray that passes thru 80 inches of lead pipe will be considered a weak force when instruments are invented that will record all forces that move between sun and planets. Our moon, having no great power of its own, acts as a storage battery when making planetary contact, loading up during contact, unloading to the earth when favorable position is reached.

Government Will Sell Holdings In Wyoming Basin

(International News Service) CHEYENNE, Wyo., Jan. 10.—The entire government holdings of 2,453 acres in the Buffalo Basin gas field, located in Park and Hot Springs counties, Wyoming, will be placed on sale at public auction in the United States land office here, on January 16, it was announced here today.

The sale is considered one of the most important in the history of Wyoming federal land sales. The Buffalo Basin field has a potential gas production of 100,000,000 cubic feet, and large oil producing wells have been drilled within comparatively short distances both north and south of the field.

They were so afraid that the news would get out of what was going on that no minutes were kept and the convention met behind closed doors. Every now and then some of the delegates got up and left because they wouldn't agree to what was going on and it seemed impossible that ever the convention would agree. An agreement was finally reached but only after a series of compromises.

And so every year the S. A. R. gets together and celebrates the deeds of their forefathers who took the reins of government into their own hands, and then hewed out a governmental structure that has stood ever since, the envy of an entire world and the model for new nations since then. There is a justifiable pride of ancestry and the achievements of our forefathers, and there must be a satisfaction in being eligible for membership in such a body.

The Chinaman's breakfasts of birds' nests and puppy dogs are quite outdone by the inhabitants of Central America, who use mosquitoes as food.

This week we will get down to brass tacks and have a business meeting with lengthy reports from committee chairman.

MAKE SPECIAL PLANS.

Members of the Elks Boy Scout Troop 5 convened in the Elks home last evening for their regular meeting. They considered two matters of outstanding interest, the annual re-registration of the troop and the coming "Anniversary Week" observance. The troop has been asked to name one scout and one adult to represent it at the party caucus in the scout headquarters on January 16. Party platforms and candidates will be lined up for the elections of February 9.

HIGHLAND BOYS MEET.

Troop 18 Highland U. P. church met in the church this week. The meeting opened with Ralph F. Davis, scout commissioner; two troop committeemen and a group of over 15 scouts present. As this was the first meeting of the month it was test night. Contests were held and points were awarded. Boy Scout calendars were distributed to the entire troop membership before adjourning.

HUMORING HIM

A little boy was running madly along the street. A kindly old lady stopped him and said: "My dear little boy, where are you going so fast?" The little boy answered: "I'm running for a doctor; my grandpa's sick!"

"Now," replied the old lady, "you run right back to grandpa and tell him he only thinks he's sick."

A couple of days later, the kindly old lady saw the little boy in the street again. "My dear little boy," she said, "is your grandpa all right now?"

"Yes," replied the little boy, "he's all right now. He thinks he'd dead, and we are going to bury him next Sunday!"

There are some organizations that are darned exclusive. The qualifications are such that only a few can get in, and quite naturally that few seem set apart. Of these organizations, the Sons of the American Revolution has rather inflexible rules of admission and unless your great great grandfather helped to put the fix on King George the Third, you're out.

Makes no difference that the folks might have been in the country since the beginning of the nineteenth century, if the men folks didn't have a musket in '76, the balls will be all black. And as for those folks who came over from England or Germany or wherever it was, say in 1825, they're practically strangers yet.

There's a certain justifiable pride about achievements of your ancestors, and once a year the S. A. R. of this city get together for a banquet and a program. The crowd is never large, and about the only way a stranger can get in is to be a newspaper man.

The speaker last night was from Mercer, Dr. John S. Duncan, and he discussed the making of the Constitution. It was an address such as every high school class in American history might well hear with profit, for he brought out some of the almost insurmountable handicaps which had to be overcome before the 13 states would agree to get along under one governmental roof.

Today, if we take the word of some of our best humorists for it, governmental bodies don't get along in the peace and harmony they should. Partly true of course, but the battles of present day bodies look pale and insipid alongside of the battling done in that early Constitutional convention called in Philadelphia.

The Old Year of Depression has gone unmentioned and the New Year of Hope has brought us a good omen in The World Almanac for 1931. Its coming makes one's heart glad and takes a load off one's memory. For here are well ordered facts—a million of them, it is said—within arm's reach on one's desk. This forty-sixth annual reference book of America, edited by Robert Hunt Lyman, is larger than ever, and better than ever.

In it are the new figures from the Census of 1930, particularly the population of every city and town in the country that exceeds 3,000.

The compact Diary of the Year—history in the making is invaluable, supplemented as it is by ten pages of Scientific Progress in 1930, and special articles on Aviation, Byrd's Expedition, the Drought and all departments of Sport. Even more important, official reports and figures show the progress made in the Enforcement of the Prohibition Law, now beginning its twelfth year.

This handy book of nearly 1,000 pages will answer a million questions, even more than an eager family of children can pester Dad with. Dad will be well advised if he will teach the children how to find the answers for themselves.

The World Almanac is published by The World News World.

Of course unfavorable publicity hurts business. Tammamy probably couldn't get more than $19.98 for a magistrate's job now.
